The opposite of west and starboard, it's more than just a place for members and their boats. This nonprofit organization gives scholarships and sponsors many community programs initiatives.

You can see their headquarters from the parking lot outside. It's all about education and 'presenting' today's Career Fair.

Football has one in Canton, Ohio and baseball has one in Cooperstown, NY. It's fitting that this one is right here in Annapolis, which is world famous for this water sport.

Their logo is an acronym in which the first and last letters are the same. They are a non-profit trade organization dedicated to promoting the recreational marine industry and the preservation of the waterways in our state.

There are five of them in the world and this nonprofit was established to preserve and protect their aquatic resources.

They sell 'big pleasure boats' right here in the capital of Maryland.

An ancient and poetic name for the Scandinavian Peninsula. This company believes in a common sense approach to marine service

What many describe as the area around the Chesapeake. They sell boat engines, parts and service to boaters.

Where the sun sets 'by the sea'. They are the wholesale division of this very well know retailer of nautical supplies.

Turn around and around until you see this booth. You may think you put it on your bed but it actually gives us all the news about boating on the Chesapeake Bay.
